Teenagers Face Quiz On Slaying

Arrests Made Here Called 'Great Work'

Alert City Officer Made Suspicious By Pair's 'Courtesy'

Two Illinois teenagers, tripped up by the law when they apparently tried to "have some fun" with a Circleville policeman, will be questioned in connection with a murder committed at Paris, Ill.

This was revealed today by Sheriff Paul Terril, of Sangamon County, Ill., after he and Deputy Charles Frederick came here to take the two young boys, both about 17, back to Illinois. The two already face charges of larceny and burglary there, the sheriff said.

Sheriff Terril described as "great police work" the arrest of the two juveniles by City Traffic Officer Bob Temple. The Circleville policeman became suspicious when the hunted two, driving through here last month with a hitch-hiker, called his attention to a metal parking meter tag which had fallen from his motorcycle.

While questioning the three, Temple noticed their car was similar to a machine being sought by police throughout this part of the state. Investigation proved his hunch correct.

The hitch-hiker was later released.

IN QUESTIONING since that time, while the teenagers were held in county jail, they allegedly admitted wounding a Winchester, Ind., man during a gas station holdup. Loaded rifles and ammunition were found in the car, and since that time have been given ballistic tests.

Results of the tests were sent direct from the London prison farm to Springfield, Ill., where they may play an important part in any effort to link the pair with the gas station slaying in Paris some time ago.

Meanwhile, Sheriff Terril pointed out that authorities over a wide section of the nation were searching for the pair when they were arrested here.

He praised the work of Officer Temple and commended the follow-up investigation of the local department.

"The department here is to be congratulated for catching a pair that could have gone on to do almost anything. It was great police work, not only on Officer Temple's part, but by all the others who later helped in the investigation.

"It may turn out that you have solved a murder."

Georgians Tighten Segregation Setup

COLQUITT, Ga. (AP)—Miller County commissioners have resolved to cut off school funds immediately if any suit is filed to force integration of the races and to set white deputies to patrolling the school grounds.

The resolution also urged all white farmers and businessmen in this South Georgia county to "emphasize to the members of the colored race the detrimental effect that any attempt at integration of the races could bring to them economically or otherwise."

Russian Churches Receiving Bids

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP)—The World Council of Churches' Central Committee wants the Russian Orthodox Church and other Christian churches in the Soviet Union to seek "full and free relationships" with the council.

At the same time, Pope Pius XII has appealed to the eastern rite churches to reunite with the Roman Catholic Church after centuries of schism. This was viewed as a plea to the Orthodox churches, including the Russian.

Airman Killed

LANCASTER (AP)—Staff Sergeant Charles Joseph Cim, 25, was killed early today when the car he was driving left Ohio 158, six miles north of here. The state highway patrol said Cim was stationed at Lockbourne AFB.

MRS. UNA FINE and her second husband, Alford, a lumber camp tractor operator, have things to talk over in their trailer home near Cisco, Calif., as they await her reunion with her first husband, Airman 2/c Daniel Schmidt, one of the 11 American airmen released by Red China. Mrs. Fine said she married her second husband after believing that Schmidt had been killed in the Korean war. She indicated she plans to stay with Fine but will meet Schmidt to discuss the future of their son.

Engineer Urges All Nations Share Any Wealth On Moon

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP)—A Dutch aeronautical engineer said today the nations of the world should agree to share the wealth of the moon—if it has any.

Simon van Munster of the Avionde Aircraft Factory, Papendrecht, the Netherlands, said the combined research efforts of all nations would be needed to get the first space ship to the moon.

Therefore, he said, anything of value found there should be divided "among the world's people."

Van Munster said cooperation in research and a share-the-wealth plan could be worked out through the U. N. Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Van Munster is here for the sixth annual meeting of the International Astronautical Federation. He said the IAF already has made contact with UNESCO concerning a program of world cooperation in research.

Saying it might be possible to reach the moon by 1980, the engineer added:

Boston Seeking Nurses For Polio

BOSTON (AP)—A nationwide appeal for more nurses to care for New England's rising toll of polio cases was broadcast last night by Dr. John H. Cauley, Boston Health Commissioner.

Dr. Cauley's appeal on a network news show came as the number of polio cases in the six-state area soared to just under the 1,000 mark.

Cauley called for all available full and parttime nurses to help in Boston's six hospitals. A clearing house for polio cases was established yesterday after Mayor John B. Hynes proclaimed a state of "limited emergency."

By The Associated Press Showers and cooler air brought some relief to heat-stricken regions of the Midwest today but the season's prolonged spell of hot and humid weather clung to wide areas in the Eastern and Southern sections of the nation.

The center of the cooler air in Western Lake Superior moved eastward. It was expected to reach north of Lake Ontario tonight.

But the cool air didn't spread far south. Although Chicago got some respite from 11 straight days of 90 or higher temperatures, the hot and humid weather persisted in the southern half of Illinois and Indiana. It was the same in Ohio.

Reading climbed to 100 yesterday in Boston and at New York's LaGuardia Field. It was a hot 94 in New York City, 97 in Philadelphia and in the 90s over most of the eastern third of the country. Similar marks were in prospect today.

Temperatures of 100 or above were general in the Southwest desert region with Blythe and Thermal, Calif., and Gila Bend, Ariz., each reporting a top of 104. It was 97 early this morning in Blythe.

But readings were mostly in the 60s early today across the Northern Plains and in the Northern Great Lakes region. They were in the 70s and some 80s

Hiroshima Sounds Appeal To World

50,000 Japanese Attend Rites Recalling Holocaust Of 10 Years Ago

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP)—Hiroshima marked the 10th anniversary of its atomic destruction today with an appeal to the world "never to repeat the tragedy."

The birthday of war's first nuclear bombing dawned hot, with a few clouds dotting the sky, just like Aug. 6, 1945.

Survivors of A-bomb victims arose before dawn to secure places close to the center of Nakashima Peace park, site of the anniversary ceremony.

As the sun rose, they burned incense and strewed flowers at the foot of the cenotaph, a stone white arch bearing the inscription "rest ye in peace, for we (humanity) shall never repeat the mistake."

By 8 a. m., the crowd had grown to 50,000. All was still.

The instant of 8:15 brought not the blinding flash and death of 1945 but the tolling of bells and sounding of whistles.

The throng knelt in prayer for the dead and for peace.

MAYOR TADAO Watanabe, in the city's annual peace declaration, said, "we will continue to remind the world never to repeat the tragedy of Hiroshima until true world peace is established eternally."

Five hundred doves were released as he spoke.

"Our great fear of the atomic bomb," the mayor said, "is not because we have experienced it, but because the people of the world do not understand how dreadful it is, because it occurred in a small dot of the world."

At 10 a. m., some 2,000 Japanese and 21 foreigners met in the public auditorium in the opening session of the three-day "World Conference Against Atomic and Hydrogen Weapons."

The foreign ministry in Tokyo denied visas to a score of delegates from Iron Curtain countries who had wanted to attend.

During the memorial services, names of 523 Hiroshimans confirmed in the last year as atomic bomb victims were added to 58,505 confirmed up to last year.

The only police count taken says 78,150 died from the bombing. City publications say the bomb cost from 240,000 to 260,000 lives, including outsiders and troops.

Meanwhile, in Washington, D.C., a survivor of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima 10 years ago, today laid a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

He prayed that under the "peerless leadership" of President Eisenhower "world disarmament may take place within our lifetimes."

When Rev. Kiyoshi Tanimoto, director of the Hiroshima Peace Center Associates completed the prayer, a U. S. Army bugler sounded taps as the wreath was placed on the tomb.

3 Lockbourne Airmen Die In Collision

CAMBRIDGE (AP)—A trip to Pennsylvania by a group of Air Force men on a weekend pass was cut short by disaster last night when the airmen's car struck the rear of a truck on U. S. 40, two miles west of here.

Three airmen were killed by the collision and two more were injured, one critically. A pair of teenagers in the truck also was injured seriously.

The servicemen, all of whom held the rank of airman third class at Lockbourne AFB, were:

Adolph McCorry, 22, Columbus, who died shortly after arrival at Cambridge St. Francis Hospital.

William R. Neptune, 19, Johnstown, Pa., and Raymond S. Fabo, 18, South Fork, Pa., both dead on arrival at the hospital.

James R. Wilson, 18, Rt. 1, South Fork, Pa., in critical condition at the hospital with multiple injuries, including a possible concussion.

George Miller, 20, the driver, Rt. 1, Holland, Ohio, hospitalized in serious condition.

Also hospitalized and in serious condition were the occupants of the truck, Homer North, 19, and Basil Warden, 18, the driver, both of Cambridge.

State highway patrol headquarters here said preliminary investigation disclosed the truck was having some sort of mechanical trouble at the time of the accident.

Yanks Criticize Soviet Methods

LONDON (AP)—Touring American farmers visited the Stalin collective farm near Rostov yesterday and found things they didn't like.

"The guests expressed various criticisms about this and certain other farms," a Tass dispatch said. "One delegate, Asa V. Clark of Pullman, Wash., was surprised that grain should have to be cleaned twice."

"Apparently," he told the director of the Ros-Sal-Mash works who was accompanying the delegation, "your works are still not producing completely effective machines. We do not clean grain once it has been harvested by a combine."

Clermont County Girl Wins 'Miss Ohio' Beauty Crown

WOOSTER (AP)—Miss Ohio is a black-haired, brown-eyed 18-year-old who plays the zither.

The title was conferred last night upon Marguerite Garr of the little village of Amelia in Clermont County, selected over 10 other candidates in judging here.

For a time, she thought she hadn't even placed.

"She listened in silence as the names of other and lesser victors in the contest were announced. Her face mirrored her disappointment.

Then an outside check for $1,000, the monetary award for becoming Ohio's representative in the Miss America contest at Atlantic City next Labor Day weekend, was held up for the audience to see.

A member of the Cincinnati Junior Chamber of Commerce, one of Miss Garr's sponsors, saw the name on the check and shouted: "You, Margie, you!"

Miss Garr turned white, then blushed and finally squealed her delight. "I'll try to do the best I can. I don't know what to say," she said later.

FIVE FEET-TWO, Miss Garr weighs 105 pounds and measures 35-24-35. For the talent part of the contest, she sang "Old Black Joe" and accompanied herself on the zither. She was entered as Miss Cincinnati by the Jaycees.

9 Ohio Counties Named In Lawsuit

COLUMBUS (AP)—Suit against the Scioto-Sandusky Conservancy District and the treasurers of nine Ohio counties was filed in common pleas court here yesterday.

The suit, filed by attorneys for the Apartment Buildings, Inc., of Columbus, as taxpayers, asked the court to order the treasurers to refund money collected in taxes for the district.

A temporary restraining order "freezing" the funds until the case can be tried was signed.

Named in the suit are the treasurers of Pickaway, Scioto, Vinton, Pike, Crawford, Wyandotte, Sandusky, Ross and Marion counties.

Bulganin Hosting Envoys' Families

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Nikola Bulganin wants some international relaxing done at his country house.

He invited all ambassadors and chiefs of diplomatic missions in Moscow to take their wives and children to his dacha or country house for a day of swimming, lunch, and other recreation.

It was the first time such a broad invitation has been extended by the head of the Soviet government. However, visits to the country places have been extended in the past to visiting notables individually and in small groups.

Planning Body Delays Action For 2 Weeks

Tense Crowd Hears Spokesmen Argue Property Rights

In an atmosphere charged with tension and soggy with heat wave temperature, the Circleville Planning and Zoning Commission began last night consideration of a request for rezoning of a residential area four blocks from the heart of the city.

For nearly two hours the commission held a public hearing on the request and then announced it would meet again in two weeks. Approximately 80 persons attended the hearing in city council chambers. About 20 women were present.

Chairman Bob Adkins of the planning body said it would give the proposal "full and careful attention". He has already emphasized that "the final decision will have to be up to city council".

The area involved in the discussions, covering nearly 10 acres, is immediately north of Hargus Creek and east of N. Court St. Nine property owners have asked that it be rezoned to commercial status to clear the way for a shopping center.

DESPITE THE sweltering heat, spectator seats were at a premium even before the session began. Nearly 60 persons watched the proceedings from inside the big room, while another 15 clustered around the doorway and in the hall.

Adkins presided, and opened the hearing with a brief talk. He outlined how the present seven-man planning body came into existence about three years ago, and how the city was first zoned in 1949.

Referring to members of the planning body in office at that time, Adkins said "they zoned the city as well as they knew how". But he went on to point out that questions involving the zoning ordinance will inevitably cause controversy from time to time.

Adkins had special praise for the present commission. "They receive a tremendous salary—exactly nothing," he reminded the gathering. He assured his listeners the commission would do its utmost to decide the question in the best interests of the community.

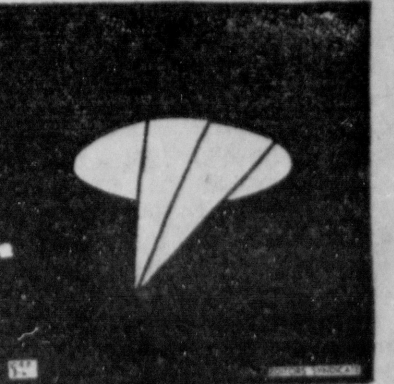

The planning body chairman declared that it had been rumored that some of its members have been approached in advance by promoters of the shopping center. To answer this allegation, he called upon Dale W. Stewart, of the Columbus real estate firm of Stewart and Neff. Stewart flatly denied any such influence had been attempted.

Adkins then presented to the commission a petition from the nine property owners seeking the zone change. At this time he re-

"EARLY BIRD SEEN BY SLEEPY WORM"

You ever wonder who wakes up the Early Bird? Of course you have! Well, the truth of the matter is those so-called Early Birds aren't early at all. They're just no good bums who haven't been to bed yet. Birds are notorious carousers and when you see a Robin or a Swallow staggering through the air before breakfast you can bet he's hung one on the night before and is looking for a pick-me-up. A bunch of Wrens have wild parties right outside my window every night. They serve fermented caraway seeds on the rocks and stomp around the nest and warble risqué songs and fly the Mambo till all hours. In fact, sometimes around 4 A. M. they make so much noise I can hardly hear my Hi-Fi Record Player.

Another Look May Be Taken At Red Trade

Unloading Of Nation's Farm Surpluses Still An Unsolved Problem

WASHINGTON (AP)—Government farm officials said today recent developments raise the prospect of a "new exploration" of the possibility of selling surplus American farm products to Soviet Russia and other Iron Curtain countries.

Russia is a potential market for considerable quantities of grain, butter, lard and other food fats — commodities which this country holds in excessive supplies.

Among the developments which these officials—who asked that they not be quoted directly—said undoubtedly will lead to reconsideration of the present nontrading policy in food are these:

1. Advocacy by President Charles B. Shuman of the powerful American Farm Bureau Federation of reopening trade relations with Russia.

2. Easing of tensions between the East and West as a result of the recent Geneva conference and the visits by Russian farmers to this country and by American farmers to Russia.

3. Recent action of Canada in selling surplus butter and wheat to Iron Curtain countries.

Undersecretary of Agriculture True D. Morse said action of Shuman in urging Russian trade was "significant" because it came from the head of an organization representing "an influential cross-section of the country."

In a speech at East Lansing, Mich., Shuman said Thursday night that trade with Russia would "contribute to world peace and would be a major step in expanding markets for the current big supply of U. S. farm products."

Herschell Newsom, master of the National Grange, another major farm organization, has been urging such trade for months.

No definite plans have been made yet, officials said, for a policy review as to Russian trade. But because of the pressure to reduce farm surpluses and the apparent improvement in relations with Russia, the question is certain to come up before long, these officials said.

One thing that has held the government back in reopening trade relations is the fact that this country would have to offer its farm products at prices competitive with those in world markets. Most American farm products are being held above world levels by price support programs.

Officials have said in the past they did not believe American officials would approve sale of American farm products to Russians at prices less than those at which they are sold in American markets.

Newsom said Americans must abandon such an "emotional attitude." He said this country must operate on the premise that there are two markets for farm products—the domestic market and the world market. He said farm products must be offered on the world markets—whether they be Russian or not—at competitive world prices.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson announced today that he will travel to Western Europe this fall for a series of meetings and conferences with U. S. officials and foreign governments on the marketing of surplus farm products.

Benson said he is making the trip at the suggestion of President Eisenhower.

Proud, Valiant USS Constellation On Last Voyage

BOSTON (AP)—USS Constellation, world's oldest warship afloat, quietly departed here for Baltimore, where she was launched in 1797.

Few saw her leave as the sun rose from the sea. Only a hard-working tug gave her a salute.

Navy officers estimated the towing job would require four or five days. At Baltimore the Constellation will be placed in a snug bed of masonry, at the expense of Marylanders who put up $100,000 for the job.

In her prime, Constellation twice humiliated French naval forces and soundly trounced the Tripoli pirates. She also participated in the War of 1812 and the Civil War.

Babe Zaharias Suffers New Cancer

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP)—Babe Didrikson Zaharias, famed woman athlete, has developed a second cancer but "firmly expects to return to golf."

George Zaharias, her husband, said last night doctors at John Sealy Hospital here found a "small cancer lesion" on the right side of the pelvic girdle. He said X-ray treatments have been started. Zaharias quoted the doctors as saying the X-ray treatments will stop the pains she has been suffering in her right hip.

Planning Body Delays Action For 2 Weeks

terated that the planning commission "will not have the final say in this matter." Council, he stressed, can over-ride any decision by the planning group.

Adkins also explained in advance that the commission would not be expected to make its decision immediately. He said the commission was entitled to an opportunity "give full study" to the matter and also visit the section of the city involved.

He indicated the commission's decision may come at the next meeting, two weeks hence.

At the suggestion of the planning chief, each side was given equal time to present its views. Attorney Kenneth Robbins spoke first. Robbins represents two of the property owners who signed the petition, Guy Rader and L. J. Hall.

He too reviewed briefly the history of the zoning ordinance and noted that a map showing the various zones is available for study in city hall, being in charge of the city service department. Robbins emphasized how the downtown commercial zoning already extends to the south bank of Hargus Creek, and how a residential zone starts on the northern side of the stream.

TOUCHING upon the nature of the businesses planned for the shopping center, he said it would be "a market of some sort—I'm frank to say I don't know just what is going in there."

The Rader property, extending all along the eastern side of the area involved, is largely "wasteland," Robbins asserted, because of its proximity to the creek. It has little merit as a prospective residential area, he said, and thus the commission should consider the higher price which can be obtained through its sale for commercial purposes.

To deny Rader the opportunity to sell his property for such use, Robbins insisted, is to deny rights due the property owner.

Robbins was followed by former probate judge George D. Young, who said he was "one of counsel" representing Mrs. Ella Poling, another of the nine petitioners.

Young took note of the "heat engendered" by such matters involving rezoning pleas, and reminded the commission that the problem on hand is no different from those handled in all average communities from time to time.

He told the commission that, although "the final decision must come from council", the planning body's stand on the issue is certain to be vitally important. It would put "a heavy burden" on the request when placed before council, he said, if the commission acted unfavorably.

YOUNG THEN declared that, when the zoning ordinance first went into effect, "it certainly did not take into consideration the future growth of Circleville." He added:

"If this city is to continue to grow, then there must be room for its business to grow." The question must not be decided, he warned, in the light of "personal prejudices."

Young said the request is not actually to "take a spot out of a residential area and rezone it". The area involved, he emphasized, adjoins the present downtown commercial zone and therefore should be considered merely an expansion of it.

When Young finished, Robbins disclosed that one of his clients, Hall, "will be in position to sell his property for about twice what it would draw in its present condition", providing the area is rezoned.

When Don Mason arose as first speaker for opponents of the proposal, heat in the room had become excessive. One woman, unable to get near a window in the spectators' section, was given permission to stand near a window in the section reserved for the commission. Many fanned themselves.

Mason explained: "I am not an attorney... I live across the street from this shopping center, or town-and-country, or whatever you want to call it."

HE SAID opponents of the rezoning request do not have money to hire attorneys, and that William Ammer had donated his services for that purpose. Mason drew attention to petitions signed "by those sympathetic to our cause" (Prior to his address, Robbins had also presented to the commission a bulky roll of petitions signed by those in favor of the plan.)

"We have not made any effort to canvass the town," Mason said. "We have not paid anybody to canvass the town."

"I have lived at my present address for 50 years... That is my home, and I am fighting for the preservation of my home and for my neighborhood."

Mason then touched upon a detail which appeared to be in sharp dispute between the opposing sides—the attitude of one of the nine petitioners, elderly Anna Claridge.

He said proponents of the shopping center plan have given the impression "that all those who signed the petition signed willingly." He charged that, instead, great pressure had been brought upon the widow to obtain her signature, and quoted her as saying: "I can't eat! I can't sleep! Where would I go at my age?"

MASON DECLARED Mrs. Claridge had told him personally that she was pressured into signing the petition.

"She told me in my house, in the presence of my family," Mason said, "that she held off as long as she could", but that one of the promoters had told her "we already have the others, and will just build all around you."

"They scared the lady to death," Mason declared. "She, today, is a nervous wreck because of this. She asked me to do everything I could to stop it."

"That is not hearsay. She told me that, with her own mouth." Mason then spoke of the ill feeling caused in his neighborhood by the rezoning request. "There are friends of ours who refuse to speak to us any more," he said.

Mason said opponents of the plan "feel there is room for expansion in Circleville without coming into a residential district."

QUOTING backers of the plan as stating all of the shopping center area would be black-topped, Mason recalled how high waters from the creek have flooded the area in past years. Recurrence of such floods, with the area black-topped, would force water into basements all over the neighborhood, he said.

Mason as followed by Ammer, who explained he was offering his services as an attorney with "not one cent of compensation." The fight against the rezoning effort, he shouted, "will be taken to the highest court of the land if necessary, and even if we have to mortgage our homes to do it."

(Ammer lives in a neighborhood immediately north of the area marked for rezoning.)

Ammer said Robbins and Young advanced different arguments. "They seem to be in conflict within their own ranks," he said.

Ammer, who holds office as Pickaway County prosecutor, said he has often heard Circleville praised while attending conventions and other gatherings away from the city. He said:

"They tell me that we have such a nice town, with wide streets, nice homes, and a nice business district. And we want to keep that impression in their minds! We don't want to stir neighbor against neighbor."

"What is best for the people of Circleville—all 10,000-plus? That—and that alone—is what counts!"

"WHO IS behind this? We know nine property owners signed the petition, but we also know they are not the real ones behind it. "Why does he hide behind the skirts of these nine property owners?"

"These outsiders won't come out and tell the city of Circleville their objectives. Why?"

In direct appeal to members of the planning commission, Ammer urged them to ask themselves:

"How would I feel if some octopus such as this (proposed shopping center) should come near my home?"

"Why do these promoters want to come into Circleville?", he demanded. "They do not do it for nothing. And what are their motives?"

AMMER challenged Robbins' assertion that unoccupied property in the vicinity of the creek cannot be regarded as a potential residential spot. Ammer said he was informed a Laclester firm sought to purchase it with that use in mind, "but they wouldn't sell it."

"I would rather have it classified as an industrial zone rather than a commercial zone," Ammer said, raising his voice. "Think of it! Lights day and night. Thousands of cars coming and going. It would be a Ringling Brothers circus 365 days a year."

Ammer dwelt on the money put into their homes by those opposed to the present plan, and warned the commission that property rights are vitally at stake.

He accused opposing attorneys of reflecting on the work of the early planning body at the time the city was zoned. They gave the project careful study for three years, he declared, "yet Mr. Robbins said it was a hazardous thing."

Property values in the affected neighborhood, Ammer said, would drop from 25 to 50 percent if the area is rezoned. He based his statement on what he said were authoritative estimates.

Ammer then joined Mason in charging that pressure had been used to obtain Mrs. Claridge's signature. He said she was warned that cars "coming and going" would "drive you crazy", and he charged that "big city" pressure groups are coming into our good town and trying to wreck it."

AMMER SAID the petition does not contain the names of all the property owners involved. He asserted:

"Mrs. Rader's name does not appear. Why? I don't know." He then went on to declare a shopping center in such a locality would be a potential hazard as well as a convenient breeding spot for liquor-encouraged crime. This, in turn, he said, would force the city to hire more policemen and to expand other public services. Cost to the city, he claimed, would far exceed any advantage gained.

The plan would make Krimmel Alley "a regular Indianapolis Speedway," he insisted. (Krimmel Alley forms part of the northern boundary of the area.)

Turning to petitions signed against the plan, Ammer said:

"We didn't pay $10 for solicitors. The reason so many signed the petition is because they said they realized the same thing could happen to them."

(Stewart, following the meeting, said nobody to his knowledge was paid for circulating petitions in the city.)

AMMER declared the proposed shopping center would be a dangerous traffic hazard, especially "with a grade school within 100 yards of that area."

At this stage he stepped to a large illustrated calendar hanging in council chambers. The calendar's illustration shows a policeman bending over a child hurt in traffic, with the printed warning: "Too late to be sorry."

Ammer, like Mason, warned that a black-topped shopping center would upset the natural drainage plan of the area and turn surface water into basements. And this, he said, would make both the promoters and city liable.

To the members of the commission, he concluded:

"If this goes through, zoning will mean nothing in Circleville... Ask yourselves one question: 'Would I want a monster such as this (proposed shopping center) near my home?'"

Attorney Earl Smith then arose to explain that he represents Mrs. Clarridge and two other petitioners (D. J. and James A. Carpenter). He thus challenged the assertion that Mrs. Clarridge was not represented at the hearing and added:

"I'LL GRANT you that she is not too anxious about selling... but she realizes Circleville must grow, and she is willing to make the sacrifice."

Smith denied any form of pressure was used to obtain the elderly woman's signature.

Robbins reminded members of the planning body that they must consider the rights of those who stand to sell their properties at a good price against those of residents opposed to the plan. Many homes in the section, he said, have reached the "status of obsolescence."

This later brought a sharp reply from Ammer who asked:

"Does he think they have set there for 100 years without repairs and improvements?"

Young expressed relief Ammer "was not only confused in his own thinking, but also misunderstood both Mr. Robbins and myself."

Stewart also arose to say he feels "Mr. Ammer is confused."

HE CHALLENGED Ammer's claim that the sale of liquor would be free and easy, and also that other cities as a custom have shopping centers only on the edges of the community.

"We are trying to bring it as far into the city to help protect the business district," he explained.

Stewart said requests for space in the shopping center have already been received from "some local merchants." But Ammer later declared that "rents will be so prohibitive" that "not a single local merchant would be located there."

Stewart emphasized that a shopping center in the proposed locality would serve to nullify the competition the local business center would otherwise suffer from a new shopping center planned near far south of Columbus, along Route 23. The latter center, he insisted, will offer little or nothing that could not be matched in the local trading spot.

At the conclusion, Adkins invited questions from members of the commission before the formal session ended. None was asked.

The planning chief then commended the audience for its orderly behavior and told those present:

"I wish you were sitting here instead of me."

HE ESPECIALLY asked that nobody bother members of the commission prior to the next meeting "in order to express your views."

As the hearing closed, George Ammer, brother of the prosecutor, stepped from the audience and, toward Stewart and other backers of the plan, asked if it is true they have an option "on land north of the city" in case the present plan fails.

No clear reply was audible from the group addressed. One unidentified voice said:

"There is always property available."

Kefauver Raps ADA Indictment Of Ike, Dems

'Indifference To Public Interest' Is Label Put On By Group

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn) labeled as "unjust" today an Americans for Democratic Action assertion that both President Eisenhower and Democratic leaders have shown "indifference to the public interest."

Kefauver, who classes himself in the "liberal" wing of his party, said he does not agree with the ADA charges voiced yesterday by National Chairman Joseph L. Rauh Jr.

Rauh said Eisenhower offered "hopelessly inadequate" remedies for critical domestic problems and the Democrats accepted them in the name of "teamwork."

The ADA is a private organization, espousing New Deal principles, which often supports Democratic candidates.

"It is unthoughtful and unjust to make any such blanket indictment of the Democratic congressional leaders and of President Eisenhower," Kefauver said.

"Congress didn't accomplish everything we would have liked to do but it was quite successful in foreign affairs matters."

"THERE WAS more confusion on domestic issues but we still have another session and I hope that in it school construction, highway, social security, water resources and farm legislation will be the first order of business."

Rauh said ADA welcomes "the revival of bipartisanship on foreign affairs." He added "such bipartisanship is no excuse for bipartisan suffocation of social and economic legislation."

He called Eisenhower's proposal for federal aid in building schools inadequate. He accused Southern Democrats of preventing a vote on any school bill because of fear of antisegregation riders.

Sen. Holland (D-Ill.) said he doesn't think anybody is going to pay much attention to the ADA complaint.

Sen. Kuchel (R-Calif.) said Eisenhower's recommendations on domestic problems were "excellent." He said blame for their failure of passage rested on the doorstep of the Democratic-controlled Congress.

The Senate passed its own version of a road construction bill but the House rejected all such legislation in a dispute over financing.

Ding Dong Daddy Has Had Enough

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The one-time "Ding Dong Daddy of the D Line," Francis Van Wie, insists he's through with marriage.

The former San Francisco street car conductor got around to divorcing his first wife yesterday. She is Mabel Joyce Van Wie. He charged desertion. Van Wie, now 69, had nothing but trouble with women since No. 1 deserted him in 1940, and after his 16th marriage in 1953 he served a five months term for bigamy.

There are about 68 million cattle in the United States.

Fliers' Health Reported OK

11 Freed Airmen Rest In Tokyo Hospital

TOKYO (AP)—Eleven U.S. airmen released by Communist China Thursday are "all completely okay physically," an Air Force medical source said after the fliers were examined by doctors today.

"It's amazing to see these men smiling after what they have been through. They are in amazing condition," the source said.

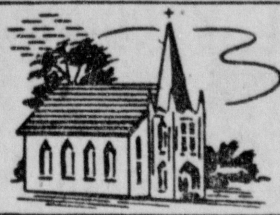

The optimistic report covered internal physical condition, not visible injuries such as a lost toe and crippled fingers suffered by Maj. William H. Baumer of Lewisburg, Pa. Baumer's left leg was wounded when the fliers' B29 was shot down. Later he suffered frost bite.

The airmen, dressed in military hospital gowns, were confined as patients in the huge air conditioned hospital at nearby Far East Air Materiel Command Base.

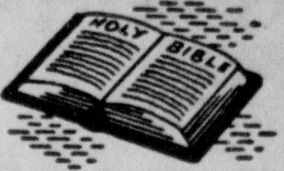

Scores of air policemen surrounded their ward to keep outsiders from contacting them. It was learned the Red Cross has set up special telephone lines to permit them to call their families, but the Air Force was permitting no calls until it is finished examining and questioning them.

IT WAS LEARNED American intelligence officials began questioning the fliers today about what they saw in 32 months inside Red China. There was good reason to believe the fliers are being sent home from Hong Kong via Tokyo because U. S. intelligence experts on China are concentrated in Japan.

One report said the men would leave Monday via Alaska

Missionary Coming Here For Talks At Gospel Center

The Rev. Austin Boggan, a member of the Oriental Missionary Society, will be the main speaker at the Circleville Gospel Center next Thursday and Friday evenings to open a series of missionary convention talks.

The Rev. Mr. Boggan, will discuss the advance of Christianity in Korea as a result of and following the conflict which involved United States armed forces. His talks are scheduled to begin each of the two evenings at 7:45 p. m.

Korea has been described as the most completely devastated country in the world's history since the sack of Carthage in 145 B.C. The Rev. Mr. Boggan will reveal that, while war was destroying, Christianity was building. And that, from the throes of war, arose a mighty Korean church born of persecution.

The Rev. Mr. Boggan was among those who answered an urgent appeal for single men to serve in the Orient for two years as Gospel Crusade leaders. His work took him to Japan and then Korea, where he handled the duties of an unusual ministry.

He distributed Gospels to the homes, preached in roofless and windowless churches, attended 4:30 a. m. prayer meetings in the bitter cold of winter, and helped distribute food and clothing to the destitute Christians.

Everywhere he witnessed the spirit and faith of the Korean Church in the face of extreme, war-born difficulties. Many of these he will describe in detail during his talks here.

The Oriental Missionary Society maintains one Bible seminary of nearly 500 students in Seoul, Korea. It has established over 350 indigenous churches since starting work in Korea in 1907.

The society's Korean Church, however, itself maintains 16 orphanages, two leprosariums, one Christian high school, and two widows' homes by great sacrificial giving.

'God's Tugboats' In Maine Marking 50 Years Service

Fifty years of service by God's Tugboats were celebrated at Bar Harbor, Me., when the Maine Seacoast Mission Society marked its anniversary.

Founded in 1905 by two Scotch clergymen from picturesque Mount Desert Island, the monastic society started with a 26-foot sailing sloop bought by the ministers and progressed to the 72-foot motor vessel owned today.

Some call the present boat the Sunbeam, its regular name. Others call it "God's Tugboat."

The Revs. Angus and Alexander MacDonald conceived the idea of a seagoing mission service to Maine's many offshore islands. They interested others. Thomas Searles of Bar Harbor, treasurer since 1905, is the only member of the original society still alive.

Although its primary purpose is to provide religious teaching, the society doubles in brass using its boat as a water taxi for missionaries, seagoing moving van for island families, Santa's aquatic sleigh at Christmas, ice breaker, hospital ship and a general emergency vessel which often augments the Coast Guard's work.

Thirteen workers carry on the society's labors under the direction of the Rev. Neal Blousfield. The work is financed from contributions by individuals and groups all over the country.

'Bridges Of Faith' Selected Theme Of Methodist Sermon

The Rev. Charles D. Reed, minister of First Methodist Church, will use for his Sunday sermon subject, in the duplicate services at 8:15 and 10:45 a. m., "Christians are Bridge Builders."

In the sermon he will stress that the most important task of Christians in this 20th century is that of building bridges of faith and understanding between opposing individuals, nations, or organizations. Many bridges must be built if our world is going to survive the threats of materialistic communism and atheism, he declared.

Special music for the duplicate services will be provided by Dr. Paul R. Jackson, who will sing "Consider and Hear Me" by Plueger. Mrs. Ervin Leist, the church organist, will use "Meditation Religieuse" by Schreiner for her prelude, and for her offertory "Eventide" by Schreiner.

The congregational singing will include the hymns: "Where Cross The Crowded Ways of Life" by North, and "My Soul Be on Thy Guard" by Heath.

The Sacrament of Baptism and the Reception of members will be a part of the 10:45 service. Visitors and friends are always welcome at First Methodist Church.

KNOW HIM ?

Juvenile delinquency was just a term until they sent the boy down the street to what they politely termed a "training school." Then it became real, because this boy wasn't just a statistic but a kid who had played with your kids. Why, only last Sunday you had gone fishing with his father.

So now . . . you wondered why. The boy came from a good home—or did he? There was money enough, luxury enough, but it's true that his parents sometimes left him pretty much to his own devices. There were his mother's clubs and his father's business, and they led an active social life.

You asked yourself why . . . and in your heart you knew the answer. It lay in those gaps that had been left in his upbringing—great chinks, that should have been filled with faith, spiritual guidance, and solid enduring values. Thinking about it, you made up your mind to start taking your own kids to church on Sundays without fail—no matter how good the weather was for fishing.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

MECHANICAL COW

BRITONS CLAIM they have invented a "mechanical cow" of small size which can be hand operated. They expect to have a rich market for it in the tropics where natives generally are in need of food values they do not obtain from their usual diets.

Grass or other forage is fed into this machine which extracts the protein in the form of a broth, cheese-like substance or "cake" faster than a cow can manufacture milk. An unfortunate fact is that the product is tasteless. That may be overcome by adding it to tasty foods to form a rich nutritive.

Not to be outdone, U. S. scientists are working on a "mechanical cow" which feeds on grains. Whereas a cow has to graze most of the day to manufacture milk, scientists theorize that by using concentrated grain they can produce a high-protein, low-calorie food for underfed peoples. Thus some of the nation's billion bushels of surplus wheat might be used for the good of the human race instead of letting it rot.

One may well view with alarm this upsurge of mechanically produced foods, however. Scientists can never put into them the gustatory delight yielded by a roasting ear or a piece of fried chicken.

A consolation for this generation is that America is not even on the borderline of any such need. This nation's problem is to hem in nature's bounty so that the country will not be buried in the surplus of its own productive system.

EDUCATION HASSLE

DESPITE THE natural air-conditioning of Mackinac Island, Mich., university deans and presidents assembled there to discuss the future of higher education got hot under the collar when Dean Leland of Northwestern University, a private institution, accused state-supported state universities of grossly exaggerating their future needs.

Not so, said educators speaking for the latter, in language described by one reporter as highly unacademic.

The assumption that present college admission standards must continue unchanged was challenged by Dr. Leland, who did not question the accuracy of population and birth rate statistics on which forecasts of future college enrollments are based. He termed current standards indefensible both now and for the future.

"There is no need whatever," he said, "of college facilities for those of low aptitude, little determination and less industry who have no reason for going to college except to acquire a social veneer." Raise the admission standards, he said, and the problem of swelling future enrollments will disappear.

A point overlooked by both sides of the Mackinac Island argument is that, more important than who gets admitted to the halls of higher learning, is the quality of instruction they find there.

THE BARRIER

RUSSIA'S fear of a reunited, free Germany must be basically a fear that the Soviet system is incapable of matching an inferior but aggressive country.

Russia has 200 million people against Germany's 80 million. Russia has organized the Eastern European nations which Hitler held. It has a half billion or more Asian allies tied to the Soviet system by the same ideology. Why, then, is Russia fearful of Germany.

It must be that the Soviets doubt they could hold their tyrannical empire together under attack. The Eastern European nations, weary of communism, would flock to the attacker along with some of the Asians. There is further doubt of the ability of the communist economic system to produce enough for defense.

So the Russian strategy is all for keeping any potential attacking area weakened, neutralized and disorganized. That is the barrier to any substantial international agreements. The road toward agreements, as the West has pointed out, is a steady progress toward freedom and a final lifting of the iron curtain.

Uncle Sam is painting his mailboxes red, white and blue. This could be helpful in keeping the original color scheme—which has been fading in some quarters—alive.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

It is because of the enormous amounts of money that each political party has to raise to get itself elected to office that our Government, despite its enormous complexity, continues to an astonishing degree to be governed by Presidential favorites—favorites in the sense that someone is rewarded by their appointment to various offices.

Even the President's Cabinet, which should be the highest administrative body in the land, often includes men whose principal qualification is fund-raising activity. Sometimes such men are rewarded for pre-convention loyalty to the fortunate contender for the Presidency.

There seem to be degrees of loyalty that have to be taken into account: Those who were loyal before the Convention; those who became loyal at the Convention; those who were bought away from other candidates during the Convention; those who became loyal during the election campaign. It takes any President some time to shake such people out of his Administration and he has to do it with extraordinarily politeness of avoid damaging local relationships for his next campaign. Some who come in this way prove able and fitting.

As so much political money has its origin in New York, those who have access to New York money-collections are very important persons politically. They often collect from out-of-towners who make their headquarters in New York. The credit goes to their home state. Often the collectors are lacking in political ideas and are not trained for the peculiarities of government service, but they expect a reward.

Some of them have never been associated with any activity other than financing, which means that they know how to pull money together from various sources, to put that money behind the purchase of an old venture or to create a new one, to find the personnel for operations and to push a product or a service.

While such managerial qualities are rare and command a high reward in business, they are not always suitable in the policy-making agencies of government, in which the individual is often required to possess philosophic qualities and historic aptitude to grasp the political potentials of a problem. The so-called policy men in government offices are rarely good at management.

The value of the Hoover Commission's reports, apart from the great volume of detail concerning our Government made available in the Task Force papers, is that they call attention to the astonishing fact that a nation which is prime in industrial and agricultural efficiency, is incapable of efficiency in government. Our Administration is costly, duplicative, wasteful and hard on citizens. It rarely performs its functions as capably as private business does.

None of the business men in government would manage their own businesses as they run their government departments. Before they take office, they always know exactly what to do; after they take office, they soon become bogged down in the administrative morass which they find in Washington.

A creeping disease overtakes them: they want to be popular; they want to be admired by their own assistants; they come to like publicity and particularly pictures of themselves. Their wives like Washington. These business men in government know how to manage their offices efficiently; it is rather that they dare not become involved in politically awkward situations. They are more troubled by public relations than by problems of management.

Ezra Taft Benson is an excellent example of the government official who tries to run a non-politically motivated administrative agency and always finds himself in political difficulties. He has not been able to break away from an internal pressure-group organization, within his Administration, which he intended to clean out when he took over but which is still functioning with great power because it is politically stronger than the responsible head of the department.

Robert Stevens was never in charge of the Army when he was its Secretary because the political generals and the inside civilian staff organized to control him. Harold Talbott quarrelled with generals and admirals who finally discovered an Achilles heel and got him out.

The Eisenhower Administration has had a large turnover on the second level of administration because so many who came to Washington with him to help establish an efficient Administration discovered that what they knew as efficiency outside government is not wanted, for political and fund-raising reasons, inside government.

Many cities hire analysts from afar. An expert, it appears, is anyone from out of town.

DIET AND HEALTH

If Child Is Victim Of Cyclical Nausea

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

RECURRENT attacks of vomiting are comparatively common among infants and children.

While there are a variety of causes for such alarming attacks, cyclical vomiting, or vomiting in fairly regular cycles, usually can be traced to nervous or dietetic causes.

Nervous Child

If your youngster is what you might call the nervous type, the excitement of the beginning of school, an approaching party, or a long-awaited outing, might precipitate an attack. Again, car sickness may be the cause.

In many instances of this sort, I think you'll find a family history of migraines or allergies. If your youngster complains of a disturbance of his vision or a severe headache, migraine might be the trouble.

Cyclical vomiting is most often found in children over the age of three. Usually, a short period of nausea, listlessness and abdominal discomfort will signal the start of an attack.

When the vomiting begins, it is apt to be difficult to control for two days or more. Your child will become tired and weak and might complain of pain in the upper abdomen.

Expert Care

He will need expert medical attention. Meanwhile, put him to bed in a darkened room.

If his bowels have not moved for 24 hours, your physician probably will suggest an enema. He may administer sedatives, also.

Sips of Juice

Try giving your ailing youngster sips of sweetened orange juice. Begin with 1 dram and double the dose each half hour as long as he retains the fluid. Or maybe your doctor will suggest a mixture of saline and glucose instead of the orange juice.

Dry Toast

You might find that your youngster will retain dry toast and honey better than the liquid. However, if dehydration can't be overcome by administration of fluids through the mouth, your doctor probably will inject a specific solution into the patient.

There's one bright outlook to this dismal ordeal of cyclical vomiting. The child usually outgrows his susceptibility pretty much by the time he reaches puberty.

one of you did. One who is now hiding guilt under a face as bland as milk!"

Never before had Edna seemed so much an outsider in Caroline's soft-footed, low-voiced household. Clive and Sallust wore looks of cold anger.

Caroline herself looked utterly surprised, as if she had never conceived that any human being would shout so many things that were better left unsaid.

"You will not need another job after I am dead, Edna," she said quietly. "I have not forgotten you in my will. And no one is going to repeat the story of what happened here this evening."

It was Sara who surprised everyone. "How can you be so sure of that, Aunt Caroline? Similar things might be said about me. Suppose I hid the ruby in order to protect Gerry after you all hinted that he might be involved in its theft? I didn't, but people are going to say I might if the story of this evening gets out."

"Oh, Sara!" Caroline's voice was quick and hurt. "We know you. We know you wouldn't do a thing like that."

"And you don't know me," Edna's lips twisted bitterly.

"What is it you want, Edna?" For the first time Caroline's voice faltered, yet even now it was the strong tremor of emotion, not the weak quaver of age.

"I demand that everyone in this room be searched at once, including me."

"Who could do the searching?" "Stevens can search the men. Miss Dacre and I can search each other with you watching us."

Caroline hesitated, then sighed. "Very well, Edna, but I think you're a fool. Dick, I hate to put you through such an insulting procedure."

"Not at all. Things have gone so far now that I should demand a search even if Miss Dacre did not."

"And I," added Sallust.

"Thank you both, Edna, ring for Stevens."

When he appeared in the doorway Caroline spoke wearily. "Stevens, we have mislaid a large ruby pendant on a fine gold chain, the property of Miss Dacre. The gentlemen wish to be searched as a matter of form. Will you please take them into the library and conduct the search yourself? We will ring when we wish you to return."

The door closed on the three men. Sara's search of Edna was thorough and painstaking. At last she turned to Caroline. "Nothing."

Edna's smile of bitter triumph contained a lifetime of frustration. "Now you, Miss Dacre."

Her search was just as thorough and a shade more brusque. "How she hates us," thought Sara. "May-I didn't take the ruby and

Project Grading Session Is Held By Saltcreek 4-H Club

Winners To Compete In County Contest

The members of the food, clothing and gardening 4-H Clubs of Pickaway County are holding final meetings to complete projects in preparation for annual grading sessions.

Mrs. Leora Sayre, Pickaway County Home Demonstration Agent, is in charge of judging of the individual projects of the club members.

Following grading sessions for each of the clubs, the members who receive a grade of "A" will become eligible for competition in an annual county judging contest, to be held in the Fairgrounds Coliseum.

First of the clubs of the community to report the completion of projects is the Saltcreek 4-H Club and Chatter Club, which held a special session this week for the project grading.

Mrs. Donald Hardman, club advisor, was hostess to the members and guests for the event. Mrs. Sayre served as judge of the various projects of the club members.

Program book covers were judged by Mrs. Dwight Moss. Vernadene Van Fossen and Judith Hardman were winners in the contest for the best decorated covers.

During a short business session, Edith Defenbaugh was appointed to represent the club in a 4-H heart contest.

Members of the club who received grades of "A", and thus are eligible to compete in the county judging at the Fairgrounds Coliseum, and their projects are listed as follows:

Edith Defenbaugh, undergarments, child care and personality; Donna Jo Hardman, second year school dress, and Kay Ann Fout, first year school dress.

Judith Hardman, lounging costume; Mary Linkenhoker, lounging costume; Jimetta Dunn, room decorating, and Garnet Derexson, Let's Sew project.

Beverly Hartman, easy-to-make cotton dress; Judy Jenkins, Let's Sew project, and Ruth Cox, easy-to-make cotton dress.

The Buckeye 4-H Colt Club meeting was held this week in the home of Tom Dern. Short talks on club projects were given by Susan LeValley, Virginia Barnes and David Brown.

Plans were completed for an annual club tour and picnic, which is to be held Sunday.

The Buckeye Bakes and Stitches met in the school for the final meeting before judging of their projects.

All members worked on the completion of their sewing projects. Each member of the cooking club baked a sponge cake, which was judged by the advisors.

Plans were completed for the final judging of projects by Mrs. Leora Sayre, Pickaway County Home Demonstration Agent.

The Flying Farmers of Muhlenberg held their first August meeting in the home of Gene Rowland. Preceding the session, the members discussed the dairy animal should be clipped for showing at the Pickaway County Fair.

A business meeting was called to order by the president, Fred Carpenter. The meeting opened with the 4-H club pledge. Reports were read and approved and a club picnic was discussed.

The members voted to make a donation from the club treasury to Berger Hospital at some date in the near future.

Mrs. Rowland, mother of the host, served refreshments at the close of the meeting. The next session is to be held Aug. 18 in the home of Jerry Brigner.

A total of 13 members of the Grow and Glow Junior Garden club met in the Pickaway Township school.

During a business session, Nancy Wilson was named as the club heart representative. The club voted to invite the mothers of the members to attend the judging of the club gardens.

Waffle Irons Are Versatile Cooking Grills

Waffle irons will bake scads of things other than waffles, says Elaine K. Weaver, Ohio State University home economist.

Included in the "scads of things" are: corn bread, corn fritters, drop biscuits, oatmeal drop cookies, brownies, date sponge cake, French toast, spice cake and gingerbread.

She says grid size and heat control are important features to look for when buying a waffle iron.

Pay a few extra dollars and get an iron with a heat control or at least one with a heat indicator, Mrs. Weaver advises. With a heat control you can set the dial for the temperature you want and never worry about the iron being too hot or not hot enough. A heat indicator merely shows the amount of heat, but does not prevent overheating.

Broad grids—at least 3/4 inch square—are better than smaller grids. Small sharp grids will not bake as crisp a waffle.

Mrs. Weaver also suggests choosing a waffle iron with a rim or tray to catch dripping batter. Even the best cooks may overflow the iron now and then.

Another feature she recommends is insulated handles and legs. Well-insulated handles prevent accidental burns; and a waffle iron which has legs or some other means to raise it up off the table won't mar the table.

Appliances Used Outdoors Require Safety Measures

Homemakers must be careful when using electrical appliances outdoors, warns Ruth Beard, household equipment specialist at Ohio State University. This is especially important when children are around.

If electric cords are not kept out of the way, playing children may trip over them and upset hot equipment. This may result in severe burns.

Cords should be covered with rubber to keep them from getting wet. They should be of adequate size to carry the current.

Avoid the use of extension cords. If they have to be used, be sure that the cords and connectors are made of rubber or other good insulating material. Check all cords for breaks in the insulation, adds Miss Beard.

In case of rain, disconnect appliance cords at the convenience outlet, but do not stand on the wet ground to do it. When disconnecting or plugging in electric equipment out of doors, stand on a dry board so you are not grounded. Outdoors, any stray current may mean a shock.

Billfolds Aid Youngsters To Manage Money

From crowded pockets to a jam-packed billfold is just a short step for today's youngsters—they start using a wallet almost as soon as there is an allowance or photographs to stuff into one!

Experts say it is a good way for parents to encourage the organization of possessions, plus teaching a child how to keep track of his money.

For back-to-school, when youngsters and teenagers will be handling locker keys, personal cash, lunch and transportation allowance, a new billfold is a good investment. Pictures of new friends met on vacation, places visited during the summer, a collection of trading cards—everything gets stuffed into the billfold, to be pulled out and passed around between classes and after school.

To suit the very young, there are strong but inexpensive plastic wallets which may be washed free of sticky finger prints. For a child old enough to have his or her own house key, other billfolds come with key pockets.

An accordion-folded picture window section is ideal for the photograph or card collector, and there are styles with a lipstick and compact for the miss who pays attention to her grooming. Gay, washable leathers with embossing or "jewel" trims suit the fashion-conscious young lady who chooses all of her accessories carefully.

However, the "secret" compartment, according to surveys, is the one most popular billfold feature with youngsters of any age! It is all good training, though, for managing their cash and identification material when they grow older.

Hollywood Plans New Punch At Portion Of Boxing Game

HOLLYWOOD — Boxing, the dead end kid of sports, may as well brace itself for another going-over from Hollywood.

"The Harder They Fall," a book that was a striking indictment of at least one phase of boxing, is going to be put on the screen.

"I don't think boxing is a sport in any sense of the term," said Philip Yordan, who is producing the picture and writing the screen play.

Yordan's sentiments erased any thought that the movie version will soften the blows punched out by the author of the book, Budd Schulberg.

"The Harder They Fall" is supposedly fiction but it is a story that not uncaringly parallels the boxing career of Primo Carnera.

The huge Italian occupied the world heavyweight throne for one year until he was battered into a dreadful mess in 1934 by Max Baer.

The era of Carnera—the fantastic and phoney buildup of a hulking giant who was anything but a champion fighter, and the gangster atmosphere that dominated the spectacle from its origin to its finish—is indeed a vulnerable one for boxing.

Yordan obviously does not intend to miss any chances to jab and gouge where it will hurt.

Nodding in agreement to the producer-writer's observation was Mark Robson, who will direct the film. He, too, has no illusions about the glamor of the business.

Robson directed the powerful, realistic picture, "Champion," another story of the prizefight game that attracted wide attention several years ago.

Yordan said he does not anticipate the warmest cooperation from the fight people when actual filming gets underway, with Humphrey Bogart as the star.

Pro Cage Team Seeks Parakeet

FORT WAYNE, Ind. — There's real opportunity here for an intelligent, basketball-minded parakeet that isn't camera shy.

The first parakeet that learns to say "Follow the Pistons" will get two season tickets for the Fort Wayne Pistons' home games in the National Basketball Assn.

To count, though, it has to be done on television over WKJH-TV in Fort Wayne.

Giants Thump Redlegs With 12-9 Decision

CINCINNATI — The New York Giants used the mighty single and walks and errors to blast the Cincinnati Redlegs, 12-9, last night before a crowd of 22,034.

The Giants slugged 17 hits, only two for extra bases, off six Red pitchers. The Reds added 14 hits to their batting averages, including home runs by Wally Post, Bob Thurman and Milt Smith.

New York tallied three times in the opening inning on four singles and two walks and three times in the second on two singles, a walk, two errors and one of two passed balls that got by Smoky Burgess in the three hour and 15 minute contest.

They scored another trio in the sixth on three singles, Dusty Rhodes' double and one base on balls. Catcher Ray Katt homered in the last three New York runs in the eighth.

The Red tallied single runs in the third and fifth and then went after winner Jim Hearn for three in the sixth on Ted Kluszewski's single and consecutive homers by Thurman and Smith. Johnny Temple singled and Burgess was walked with one out in the ninth. Klu singled home Temple and Post hit the first pitch over the left field wall to bring the Reds within range of the Giants. Don Liddle walked Gus Bell. Then Johnny Antonelli was sent in to squelch the uprising. He did.

All-Stars Trip Cardinals, 9-6

CHICAGO — The College All-Stars received their first taste of professional football yesterday and quite well.

They whipped the Chicago Cardinals, 9-6, in an exhibition scrimmage with Notre Dame's Ralph Guglielmi passing for a touchdown and Ohio State's Tad Weed kicking a game winning field goal in the final quarter.

No extra points, punts or kick-offs were used in the scrimmage.

The Cardinals scored in the second period on a quarterback sneak by LaMar McHan.

The All-Stars meet the Cleveland Browns at Soldier Field next Friday night.

Burns Prove Fatal

CLEVELAND — Gabor Toth, 38, burned Tuesday while pouring caustic soda into a glue-making vat, died yesterday. The substance foamed up and overflowed the vat.

Americans waste more than 20 per cent of their food through spoilage and over-generous portions which are not eaten.

Atoms are smaller than the wavelength of visible light, hence can never actually be seen. They are identified, however, by their performance.

Snider, Banks Staging Duel Of Home Runs

CHICAGO — Brooklyn's Duke Snider and Ernie Banks of the Chicago Cubs, both pushing ahead of Babe Ruth's home run record for one season, are creating new interest in the National League.

With the pennant generally conceded to the Dodgers, National League followers are turning to the home run race where Snider and Banks are running one-two.

The two power hitters staged an interesting exhibition at Wrigley Field yesterday when the Cubs knocked off the Dodgers, 10-8. Banks blasted three against Pittsburgh Thursday to move into a tie for the league lead with Snider at 36 each.

Brooklyn stormed into town yesterday and the first time Snider got his hands on the bat in the first inning, he put one out of the park to break the tie. Banks matched it in the first inning by slamming the first pitch into the stands to make it 37-36.

Not to be outdone, Snider whacked No. 38 in the fifth inning.

Banks, who several days ago tied a major league record of four grand slam home runs in one season, came to bat in the eighth inning with the bases loaded.

The crowd of 1,868, having already seen seven home runs in the game, began howling and then hushed as Banks worked the count to 1-1 before sending a fly ball out to left field.

Both are ahead of Ruth's pace when he belted 60 home runs in 1927. The Babe hit his 37th in his 14th game on Aug. 16 and No. 38 came the following day. Yesterday was Snider's 108th game and Banks' 112.

Benefit Given For Racer's Son

COLUMBUS — Five-year-old Darl Carson III, who only last week lost his father in a racing car accident, today was assured of a college education—thanks to the drivers with whom his father raced, the Columbus Motor Speedway and 4,516 racing fans.

They combined last night in a benefit program to raise about $4,500 for a trust fund for little Darl. The program was held at the Columbus Motor Speedway on which the boy's father was fatally burned last Friday night in the wreckage of his racer.

The drivers, who also gave Darl a pony, raised $1,250 by donating half their purses. The track management matched that sum, and a collection among the crowd raised the remainder.

Youth Injured By Rocket Blast

WILMINGTON — Jack McClanahan, 18, has some wounds today to recall his curiosity.

He was looking down in a 5-foot crater yesterday when a rocket exploded and scraps hit him in the chest. The flask was removed in Clinton Memorial Hospital and his condition was reported as good.

The crater was created when two F86 Sabre Jets collided in midair. Both pilots escaped injury and one, Lt. Col. Howard Askelson, 34, managed to land his plane at his base, Wright-Patterson near Dayton.

Lt. John Goodwill, 26, bailed out. His plane made a 25-foot crater in a corn field and parts made smaller holes. Twenty-four rockets the plane was carrying continued to go off for more than an hour. One of these injured young McClanahan.

Dambach Eyeing Post At OSU

COLUMBUS — The chief of Ohio's wildlife division says he would return to Ohio State University to head its Natural Resources Institute, if the post were offered him.

Dr. Charles A. Dambach, wildlife chief since 1950, said yesterday he was interested in the post. Dambach, however, said he was happy in his present job.

"I left the university reluctantly to set up the wildlife division on a professional scale," he said. "I would definitely take the job, but only because I feel I have fulfilled my obligations here."

India Seeking Steel Supply

CALCUTTA, India — The Indian government plans to scour the world for the steel it needs for its industrial development. The government announced it had placed an order with Czechoslovakia for 11,000 tons.

Official sources said the United States, Japan, Britain and Russia also would be asked to help meet the nation's needs of a million tons annually until 1959.

Big Batch Of New Additions Slated For Ohio State Fair

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — What's going to be new at this year's Ohio State Fair, Aug. 26 through Sept. 20.

Ask the state agriculture director, Andy Sorensen, and he'll reel off a list as long as your arm. And the new attractions, plus the old standbys, add up to what Sorensen and his aides believe the attractions they have to offer this year will attract at least one-half million people during the eight-day run. Most will pay 75 cents to get on the grounds.

The Youth Building is nearing completion and, except for the dormitories, will be in use during the fair. Opening day of the fair will be known as Youth Day, and the first event will be a youth talent contest in the special events tent.

New to the fair is the build-it-yourself farm equipment show which will exhibit machinery built on the farm either to perform special tasks or to get around buying high-priced equipment.

There also will be an enlarged antique farm machinery exhibit.

And the factory-made machines also will be shown. The show will be made up of exhibits from one large manufacturer—Ferguson—and a number of smaller ones. All the big manufacturers except Ferguson decided not to exhibit their wares. But this year's exhibit will be larger than last year's.

The natural resources department has expanded its exhibit, including the free fishing pond for boys and girls.

New this year will be a meat show where various cuts of meat and full carcasses will be exhibited under refrigeration.

There's a new fence around the race track—and there'll be something new on the race track, championship stock car races.

The centerpiece in the horticulture building is new, a 14-foot icicle. Sorensen said colored lights will be beamed on the icicle which, when it melts, will help cool the building.

There will be more parking space than ever before, as the fair this year will sprawl over 265 acres. Because the fairgrounds is so large, shuttle buses will be used to get fairgoers from one place to another — again something new.

For the first time there will be a state fair queen, to be chosen from among queens of county and independent and junior fairs throughout the state.

More than 100 high school bands are entered in a competition. They will have two new band shells for their programs.

Landscaping around several of the buildings is new.

Sorensen is proud of the entertainment programs the fair will feature. Entertainers include Lassie the dog with a rodeo, Hopalong Cassidy and his horse, Topper, Gisele MacKenzie, singer, and the Ted Weems orchestra, the horse show, Snooky Lanson, Eddie Peabody, Billy May's orchestra, Peggy King, the singer, Bill (Davy Crockett) Hayes, an All-Ohio talent show.

For those who like wrestling there will be two championship matches the night of Sept. 2.

Entries for all sorts of competitions—from jelly judging to fiddling of old time music—are coming in better than one year ago, Sorensen says.

The unofficial emphasis this year will be on hospitality at the fair.

"This is a hospitality fair," said Sorensen. "It's a neighbor's fair. We've done things to make the fair interesting both to those who live in the country and those who live in the city."

"We like to have people come to the fair and will do everything we can to make their visit enjoyable."

"They'll get more for their money than they did last year. It's the cheapest show in Ohio, from an admission viewpoint."

Ohio Governor To Take Place In Spotlight

He May Both Sweat And Bask At Parley In Chicago Tuesday

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's Gov. Frank J. Lausche again will claim the limelight at the National Governors' Conference opening Tuesday in Chicago.

Whether he will bask or sweat in the publicity glare depends on how you view his role.

Politics always plays an important part when the governors meet and Lausche has received increasing mention as a political figure of national stature.

This year the five-term Democrat has added a new interest that governors of other states can hardly ignore, regardless of their political faiths.

He has threatened to cancel motor vehicle reciprocity agreements with individual states unless the pact is revised so Ohio can keep its lucrative axle-tax on big trucks.

Under reciprocity, states honor each other's license plates. Some agreements apply to truck fees. But Ohio and some others impose taxes on both out-of-state and local trucks.

Ohio's Supreme Court hit the practice. The court said a 1937 reciprocity agreement with Michigan applied to Ohio's axle-tax imposed in 1953 and ordered refunds.

Despairing Ohio officials said the decision might cost Ohio millions of dollars in refunds to truckers of other states and endanger the revenues pledged to help pay for badly needed new highways.

Producing about 16 millions a year, the tax costs trucks with more than two axles from 1/2 to 2 1/2 cents a mile to use Ohio roads.

Lausche acted on three fronts to salvage the levy. He called for a rehearing in the Supreme Court, promised a special legislative session if necessary and coupled his demand for reciprocity changes with assurance that Ohio would not impose its license fees on motorists of other states.

But the governor declined to comment on the possible effect that reciprocity cancellations might have on Ohio motorists in other states.

Officials speculated that he might get more than a hint from other governors at the four-day conference in Chicago's Edgewater Beach Hotel.

Lausche long has advocated truck taxes based on weight and distance traveled. Other governors have supported that principle.

Politicians expressed belief that if Lausche emerged from the conference unmarked by a truck tax showdown, he would gain further political prestige.

Democrat Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan said in 1953 he considered Lausche a presidential possibility, and that was after Ohio imposed its truck tax.

Gov. Robert F. Kennon of Louisiana, conference chairman, recently termed Lausche a potential candidate despite the Ohio governor's expressed lack of interest in

Innocence Claimed In Robbery Case

CLEVELAND (AP)—Louis E. Teller, 27, pleaded innocent in federal court yesterday to conspiracy to rob a bank. He will be arraigned later on a charge that he robbed another Cleveland bank of $23,000.

Three younger men were arraigned with Teller on the conspiracy charges. Philip C. Elia, 19, and Thomas R. Coletta, 19, also pleaded innocent. Robert C. Weathers Jr., 22, pleaded guilty and his case was referred to probation.

O'Neill Endorsed

PORTSMOUTH (AP)—Scioto County Republican Central and Executive Committees Friday reported the endorsement of Atty. Gen. C. William O'Neill for the Republican nomination for governor.

Chest Goal Up

CLEVELAND (AP)—The 1955 goal of the Cleveland community chest campaign, Oct. 17-27, is a record $8,110,000 and $400,000 more than the amount of money raised last year.

"I don't have a dime," the lady exclaimed and hurried away before Weber could tell her he could take it out of the $5.

Soon she was back with a dime.

"I borrowed it," she smiled.

Weber took the certificate and the dime and pushed out a $5 bill.

"Please change it. I have to pay back the loan," the lady said.

Injuries In Jail Blamed In Death

HAMILTON (AP)—Walter Vernon Winkler, 44, died Sunday from injuries inflicted upon him while he was in jail, Coroner Garret J. Boone reported yesterday.

Dr. Boone said the injuries may have been inflicted by fellow prisoners. The incident points up, Dr. Boone said, the inadequacy of the county jail for the confinement of mentally or physically ill prisoners. Winkler had been awaiting transfer to a state hospital in Cincinnati.

Politics Cited In Dover Dispute

DOVER (AP)—Mayor Harry Stucky says a taxpayer's suit challenging a municipal insurance contract was designed to "damage me politically."

Dover insurance man Albert W. Riffle, whose bid for providing insurance on the municipal light plant was rejected, filed the suit. He charged there was collusion on the part of the city board of control, of which the Democratic mayor is a member, in awarding the contract to an insurance agency owned by Eugene H. Hanhart, state Democratic chairman.

Postal Aides Meet Strangest People

OMAHA (AP)—Postal clerk Joe Weber says nobody has to believe it, but it did happen.

A woman walked up to his counter recently and tendered a $5 savings certificate to be cashed in. Weber told her it would cost a dime because the certificate hadn't been held for a month.

"I don't have a dime," the lady exclaimed and hurried away before Weber could tell her he could take it out of the $5.

Soon she was back with a dime.

"I borrowed it," she smiled.

Weber took the certificate and the dime and pushed out a $5 bill.

"Please change it. I have to pay back the loan," the lady said.

Ladies Opposed To Ladies In Ads

NEW DELHI (AP)—"Woman is an emblem of purity, simplicity and sacrifice. She is not an article of advertisement."

On that note, the women's organization Adarsh Mahila Sabha appealed here to businessmen to stop displaying women's clothing in windows and using feminine forms in advertisements, calendars and other commercial displays.

"Such a cheap method disgraces womenfolk," the ladies said.

Barkley Is Cool On Happy Chandler

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Sen. Alben W. Barkley, making a belated appearance in the Democratic primary fight, has accused A. B. (Happy) Chandler of deserting him when Barkley sought the presidential nomination.

Barkley also challenged Chandler's fitness to run for governor on the party's ticket, claiming he frequently deserted the Democrats to support other candidates.

Barkley spoke in behalf of Bert T. Combs, who is battling Chandler for the gubernatorial nomination. Kentucky holds its primary election tomorrow.
